Dear Readers

When we speak about international communication, both in personal and official situations, English is most likely the language we choose to enable communication between each other. Every country uses it commonly when they want to send messages to international community. Most international organizations present their official statements in this language, which granted English some prestige. In modern world we consider it considered a fundamental skill for those who participate in international dialogue.

In personal situations, communication and mutual understanding. It allows us to form friendships beyond borders. The importance of English in Education

English has had a huge impact on international education. It is currently mandatory subject in most schools across the world and for good reason, as some of the world best universities teach lessons in this language. English can also help students in their personal lives. Learning a new language can help broaden students minds, while also help them develop emotional skills. As we already mentioned, it provides job opportunities and help people communicate through the internet.

Across the globe, many international schools offer English classes. This allows to train international professionals and future skilled experts which are not limited by their native country borders.

The Lost Blossom's Fruit

During the last Fall,
 She lost grip over whole of her dead leaves.
 Then came Winter!
 Thought it was impossible to survive the freezing
 December.
 Then entered the refreshing breeze of Spring,
 Ah! Blessing those lifeless looking branches with new leaves and blossom.
 Thought this was it;
 She is not losing any of her anymore.
 But as the summer wind blew
 The flowers in her started giving up its petals.
 Then a realization hit her soft
 Nature demands fall from everyone;
 No matter the number of times we fall
 Yet, we also bear fruit as we lose the blossom in us.

Today.

Today can change yesterday's regret;
 Today can change tomorrow's fret.
 What matters is today.

With yesterday's lesson on our back,
 Today, we acquire the key to enhance what we lack.
 Indeed, what matters is today.

Today is the key to shaping what comes next, they say.
 With today's efforts your sacrifices will repay;
 Today's labour will make your way.

Stop regretting the past, let go of sorrow,
 Live in the present, make change and
 embrace today's morrow,
 Because what matters is today.
