race perfectly—it is not to go without falling or stumbling—but to stay disciplined, humble, and to never give up when life hits hard. You have 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, for the rest of your life to accomplish something. The best time to start working on your goals is today—not tomorrow. You can build something that will bring the greatest return on all those years of work and struggle.

There will come a time when the clock ticks faster, and you don't want to look back on your life with regret over wasted years. So, find something noble to invest your life in—and invest early.

Most things of value in life are like a garden: growth takes time. Relationships take time. You don't just get the reward; you have to invest time and resources to produce something of quality. As the scripture says:

"I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith."

KING OF GODS

As the sun rose over the Sun Feather City, from the darkness of its dawn, the sun shone bright upon the city.

A boy around the age of 13 or 14 got up from his warm and comfortable bed and put on his clothes- all in one breath. His name was Zhao Feng, his eyes were shining brightly and he had a tall and masculine body. He also had long hair that almost reached his shoulders.

He was one of the geniuses among the Zhao family in Greenleaf Village. Every five years, the Zhao family sent two geniuses to the main Zhao family as outer disciples to compete among various disciples from various sects and families.

"I am just a step away from reaching the second stage of Martial Path," Zhao Feng murmured to himself.

It was a world of cultivation where the strong ruled the world. The cultivation was divided into many stages. The first stage of Martial Path, the second, and the third. After that comes the Origin Core Realm, Great Origin Core Realm, and the Void God Realm. However, Void God Realms were considered as legends in the Sun Feather city.

On this very day, Zhao Feng and Zhao Yufi were the two geniuses from the Greenleaf village and they were sent to the main branch of the Zhao family. Zhao Yufi was a charming lady who adored Zhao Feng.

As Zhao Feng went to the main branch of the Zhao family, he realized that there were many geniuses, and he was just a frog at the bottom of the well.

In the evening, all the geniuses from various sects and families gathered at a very large and magnificent hall. A voice echoed across the hall, and the voice pressured everyone present.

"There will be a tournament which will take place after three months, and the top ten geniuses will be taken as an inner discipline".

The owner of the voice was an elder of the sect. His name was Cris, he wore a golden cloth, and his cultivation was at the Great Origin Core Realm, just a step away from the Void God Realm. However, to reach the Void God Realm, they need ten to thirty years if there was no bottleneck.

Cultivators could live up for thousands of years. Their lifespans increased with each stage of cultivation.

"The strength of this elder is no joke". Zhao Feng, murmured to himself. Just a glance from the elder made the geniuses hard to breathe. The strength between them was like heaven and earth.

That night, Zhao Feng returned to his home and began cultivating, legs crossed. It started raining, lightning and thunder started descending from the sky. Zhao Feng snapped, opened his eyes, got up and looked out the window.

"I should go and check it out".

Zhao Feng got out of his house and went to the garden where there were many tall trees. There were many lightning strikes, and as he looked up, he saw a dark cloud which contained a huge amount of lightning which could strike anytime.

"That's weird," he murmured.

As he was staring at it, the dark clouds finally released a huge bolt of lightning and struck Zhao Feng. He screamed and the next instant, he felt a huge pain in his left eye and he lost his consciousness. As the morning sun rose, Zhao Feng woke up and he was still in the garden. He was not able to open his left eye. For a moment, he thought he had lost it. But when he tried to force it open, there was a surge of pain within his left eye.

"I need to go home," he murmured to himself.

After going home Zhao Feng looked in the mirror and he saw his left eye was different from his right eye. It was pitch black in the center and as he looked outside of his window he could see clearly up to a hundred miles. He could even see the flies flying far away and not only that, he can also identify the birds by gender.

"How is this possible?"

He was both terrified and excited at the same time. Suddenly, a voice rang in his mind.

"The ancients have fallen, and the ancient god slain will turn into a trillion dust".

"Who is there?" Zhao Feng shouted.

And in the next instant the voice echoed again.

"To continue my bloodline of the eye you must rule the people and control every race. You lucky youngster- do not disappoint me".

Zhao Feng was in a state of confusion.

"What a strange bloodline..."

The eye was one of the Great God's eyes of the ancient time and it had unlimited potential. Even the ancient eye was shocked to discover a soul which was completely in sync with his. Zhao Feng started to cultivate as the tournament was only months away. Time passed quickly and Zhao Feng had reached the Great Origin Core Realm with the help of the Great God Eye. There were still three days left until the tournament. Zhao Feng had to make use of this time.

In these three days, Zhao Feng was able to reach the Void God Realm and he became unparalleled among the geniuses. Even the grand elder priest was just an ant in front of Zhao Feng. And the three days quickly passed, it was the day of the tournament. It was a bright day with thousands of spectators from various sects and families. Among them there were few who stood out among the crowd. They were powerful people who had the power to destroy the Sun Feather city with the snap of their fingers.

On the day of the tournament Zhao Feng defeated every opponent easily and he was ranked first among the youth present. Even the elders and grand elders from various families and sects grew wary of Zhao Feng. Even with the combined attack of those powerful people could not harm Zhao Feng.

From this day onwards Zhao Feng's name spread across the entire place and everyone grew wary of him.

The moral of the story-

"A bunch of weaklings are nothing compared to a bold figure."

EALI AND CENNEI (THEIR STORY)

In a quaint village nestled between rolling hills, two friends, Cennei and Eali, lived in neighboring houses. They had been friends since childhood, their bond forged through various obstacles—through thick and thin. Eali, the elder of the two-by-two years, had a passion for literature. She would often spend her days reading books, composing poetry, and weaving stories. Cennei, on the other hand, was a bright and ambitious girl who dreamed of excelling in science and becoming a doctor.

One Sunday afternoon, as they sat under the old banyan tree that stood proudly between their homes, Eali recounted stories from her favorite books, her voice animated and full of joy. Cennei, listening intently, was inspired by Eali's stories.

"You know, Eali," she said thoughtfully, "each story has its own past that shapes the characters—just like us. Our childhood memories make us who we are today."

Eali nodded, a smile spreading across her face. "Absolutely! It's our past that shapes who we are today. You're ambitious to become a doctor because you helped your grandmother with her medicines. Your past actually geared you up to be who you are now."

Cennei's eyes lit up as she reflected on her own past and how it had motivated her to pursue her dreams.

As they grew older, life took them in different directions. Eali pursued literature—writing novels, poems, articles, and more. Cennei, passionate about becoming a doctor, went on to pursue higher studies. Yet, even though they were physically apart, the echoes of their past kept them bonded. Whenever one felt lonely or in need of support, they would recall their shared memories—how they laughed, dreamed, and supported each other. Of course, they would still call each other and share stories from their lives.

As they continued to support each other, even in different fields, their friendship remained the key to their dreams. Cennei would often share scientific insights that inspired Eali's writing, while Eali's stories encouraged Cennei to persevere through her studies.

Years later, both of them succeeded in their respective fields—Cennei became a doctor, and Eali became an author. Their friendship celebrated the differences in their paths yet cherished their shared past.

In the end, through Cennei and Eali's story, we learn that true friendship transcends time. The echoes of their past lingered in their hearts, shaped their present, and helped them overcome challenges.

Stain of memories

For everything there was, and for nothing there will be
May-may it remind the skies
To cover the sun when it shines too bright.

May it bring the clouds to wash away
All the memories that stain
My heart, my mind,
And every thought of me with you.

When May illuminates its final night
To bring forth a new dawn,
There will be nothing left-
For me, with you.

The beginning of the end

The 106 stepping stones, now behind,
Our college life—a chapter unwinds.
Memories etched like lines in our hands,
Moments we shared throughout these lands.

We laughed, we cried, we grew, we thrived,
In classrooms, in hostels, friendship alive.
Late-night talks during exam nights,
Unforgettable moments through all the years' flights.

The teachers' guidance, the friends we've made,
The moments we created, the lessons we've learned;
The struggles we faced, the triumphs we've known,
All blend together in a bittersweet tone.

As we stand here today,
Looking back on the journey we've left behind,
We know that life will take us far and wide,
But the memories of college will forever reside.

The 106 stepping stones that led us here
Will soon be memories—and possibly a nostalgic tear.

A bus journey from home to college holds so many scenes,
But we'll carry the lessons, the laughter and the tears,
And cherish these moments through all our years.

Though our college life may be coming to an end,
The impact it had on us we'll cherish forever, my friend.

Farewell, dear college; farewell, dear friends.
Though we'll move apart and take different roads,
The memories of our time together will forever unfold.

How AI is changing the way we work: Will humans become irrelevant?

Kekhrievi-i

Dept of Education, Modern College,
PipHEMA

Artificial intelligence (AI) is transforming the workplace worldwide, automating processes, improving efficiency, and reshaping industries. From AI-powered chatbots in customer service to machine-learning algorithms analyzing vast amounts of data, businesses increasingly rely on AI to streamline operations. However, this growing dependence raises an important question:

Will AI eventually replace human workers?

AI is already automating repetitive tasks in industries like manufacturing, transportation, and retail. Self-checkout systems, robotic assembly lines, and automated customer support all reduce the need for human intervention. While this shift has led to concerns about job displacement, AI is also creating new employment opportunities in fields such as AI development, cyber security, and data science. The demand for professionals skilled in AI-related technologies continues to grow, indicating that AI is not eliminating work but transforming it.

Despite AI's advancements, humans remain essential in areas where machines fall short. Creativity and emotional intelligence are skills AI cannot fully replicate. Leadership, innovation, and roles requiring human interaction, such as healthcare, counselling, and education, still depend on human expertise. AI may assist in these fields, but it cannot replace the human touch.

The future of work well is shaped by collaboration between humans and AI. Rather than replacing workers, AI will handle routine and data-driven tasks, allowing humans to focus on complex problem-solving and strategic decision-making. To remain relevant, workers must embrace continuous learning, adapt to technological advancement, and develop skills that complement AI rather than compete with it.

AI is not making humans irrelevant; it is redefining the nature of work. By integrating AI as a tool for efficiency and innovation, industries can create a balanced workforce where technology enhances human potential rather than replaces it.

Unmasking the stigma on drug abuse

Substance abuse and the stigma surrounding it is a complex issue that affects individuals, families, and communities. Despite being recognized as a medical condition, addiction is often met with judgment and discrimination, preventing many from seeking help. Drug abuse involves the misuse of psychoactive substances, leading to severe physical, mental, and social consequences. Addiction is influenced by various factors, including genetics, environment, mental health, social circumstances, and trauma. It affects the brain's reward system by releasing feel-good chemicals like dopamine, making it difficult for individuals to control their substance use despite negative consequences. Chronic drug use can alter brain structure and function, impairing cognitive skills and decision-making abilities.

The stigma surrounding drug abuse is one of the biggest barriers to recovery and treatment. Individuals with substance use disorders are frequently judged, rejected, and discriminated against, discouraging them from seeking professional help. Society often perceives addiction as a moral failing rather than a complex medical condition, leading to social rejection, employment discrimination, and inadequate healthcare support. Instead of receiving compassion and medical treatment, individuals struggling with addiction often face punishment and isolation, which only worsens their condition. Institutional stigma further compounds the problem by prioritizing criminalization over rehabilitation, resulting in mass imprisonment rather than accessible treatment and support services.

Stigma makes the path to treatment and recovery even more difficult. The fear of judgment prevents many from seeking medical or rehabilitation support, while a lack of social support worsens mental health challenges, making recovery even more daunting. Punitive legal and healthcare approaches often focus on punishment rather than treatment, leading to high imprisonment rates instead of rehabilitation opportunities. Stigma also contributes to delayed treatment, inadequate care, worsened mental health conditions, strained family relationships, limited employment opportunities, increased poverty, and insufficient funding for addiction treatment programs. As a result, many individuals find themselves trapped in a cycle of addiction and suffering, with little hope for recovery.

To overcome the stigma surrounding addiction, society must shift its perception and response to drug abuse. Education and awareness are key to changing societal attitudes. Teaching people that addiction is a medical condition, not a moral weakness, can help prevent misconceptions. Expanding access to treatment by providing mental health services and rehabilitation programs is crucial for supporting recovery.

Policy reforms must prioritize treatment over punishment, ensuring that individuals struggling with addiction receive rehabilitation, therapy, and job support. Strengthening support networks through community programs, peer support groups, and family involvement plays a vital role in maintaining long-term recovery. Employers can contribute by creating supportive work environments and offering incentives for seeking treatment. Additionally, positive media representation can help humanize individuals with addiction by sharing real-life stories of recovery and resilience rather than reinforcing negative stereotypes.

Addressing drug abuse requires a compassionate and evidence-based approach. However, stigma often prevents individuals from seeking the help they need, worsening addiction's consequences. By promoting awareness, expanding support networks, and reforming policies, we can create an environment where individuals feel safe to seek help. Breaking the stigma is essential for recovery and for building a healthier, more empathetic society that supports those affected by substance abuse. It is time to stand together and provide individuals struggling with addiction a chance to heal, recover, and lead fulfilling lives.
